Findings from NYMTC's Palisades Shared Use Path Feasibility Study to be Discussed During Public Review Meetings on April 14, 15, and 16

NEW YORK, April 1, 2025 -- The New York Metropolitan Transportation Council (NYMTC) will hold a series of three public meetings to discuss findings from its Palisades Shared Use Path Feasibility Study, a project to explore the possibility of making connections between the George Washington Bridge in Fort Lee, New Jersey and the Governor Mario M. Cuomo Bridge in South Nyack, New York. Two in-person meetings and one held virtually will be held April 14, 15, and 16. See meeting details below for more information.

The proposed Palisades Shared Use Path Study area extends roughly 20 miles along the west side of the Hudson River, traversing busy roadways, historic downtowns, and public parklands, including Palisades Interstate Park and Tallman Mountain State Park. The purpose of the study explores creating a path that is more intuitive, accessible, and safe for people walking, biking, running, and rolling along this scenic route.
